MANY STILL IDLE.

Grand Trunk Trainmen Who Went on Strike Awaiting Reinstatement.

Inland Pond, Aug. 25.—As yet, few of the Vermont trainmen connected with the passenger service on the Grand Trunk railroad who went on strike last month, have been reinstated. The former strikers, who were in the freight service, are being put to work gradually. The old passenger conductors and others, who are still idle, express dissatisfaction with the failure of the company to reinstate them.

James Mordock of Toronto, first vice president of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, was in Inland Pond this week and paid the members of the local union their strike pay. He held a conference with the men and assured them that they would be reinstated, according to the terms of the settlement with the road.

S. N. Berry of Toronto, first vice president of the Order of Railway Conductors, is expected here this week.
